Eightieth Year, No. 3 — Upland, California, Thursday, April 18, 1974 — 20 Pages 10 Cents

Program for shut-ins begins here

Volunteers are offering to shop for groceries for shut-in Ontario-Upland area residents.

Al Voak, a retired Upland man, is spearheading the newly formed Shopping for Shut-Ins program.

He has secured promises of volunteer help from Ontario Kiwanis Club and local church group members.

The program will be for senior citizens or handicapped persons who are either unable to go shopping or can do so only with great difficulty.

Shut-in residents seeking the service will have to submit a deposit payment or food stamps and a shopping list in advance.

'Crisis Service' seeks volunteers

Crisis & Suicide Intervention service, an Upland-based 24-hour telephone helpline, is seeking men and women interested in participating in a training program preparing them for volunteer work with this organization. At the present time daytime workers only are needed to take calls in their homes for one six-hour shift weekly.

The Crisis help line has been in operation for two years and provides free help in strict confidence to anyone who calls 986-1141. Volunteers handle all calls in their homes. An answering service first receives the call and then transfers it to the volunteer's home. Volunteers help callers with emotional problems by listening, dispensing information and referrals. In emergencies a rescue squad or minister may be sent to the caller's home.

The training program will be held from April 18 to May 20 and will include role play, lectures and discussions under the supervision of professionals. The sessions will be from 9:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. (location to be announced later) and trainees will be asked to bring a sack lunch.

Interested persons are asked to send a brief resume to Box 1826, Plaza Station, Ontario, CA. The resume should include name, address, phone, something of volunteer's personal background and why he or she is interested in this type of volunteer work.

Pettis attacks 'rating groups'

Rep. Jerry L. Pettis (R) of the 33rd district has levelled a blistering attack on "self-interest organizations that publish "ratings" which profess to portray the performance of Members of Congress." "Political rating systems are a farce," Pettis charged. "The groups that make up these ratings run the gamut from flaming liberal to ultra-conservative. Each group chooses its own special interest votes — 10 or 15 from the more than 500 votes cast each year — then they claim the one vote in 50 or 60 they decided to use gives a true picture of a representative's performance. This is totally misleading and the entire premise is ludicrous."

Pettis' remarks came after he received a telephone call from a newspaper in his Congressional District asking him if he'd like to comment on his latest rating by the Ripon Society. The congressman had not yet received a copy of the ratings which were released to the press before they were sent either to Members of Congress or to Ripon Society members.

"I'd like to know how I'm supposed to answer questions on why I voted as I did when I don't even know what votes were used for this particular 'ratings game.' All I knew was that the reporter said I received a rating of 69-percent from a moderate Republican organization.

"I don't care if I received 100-percent or zero. It is ridiculous to assume that the job of a Congressman or woman and the way we represent our constituencies can be correctly portrayed through any of these ratings," Pettis stated.

The Congressman noted that most ratings are based on votes taken on obscure or special interest amendments, rather than on legislative issues as a whole.

"Some amendments, naturally, are important. But often amendments are offered which would benefit only a handful of people or on the other hand which would eliminate duplication of Federal programs already established or approved when another bill was considered. Yet, no mention is made of these factors when the ratings come out. You can vote against duplication which wastes the taxpayers' money and according to a ratings group, you end up looking like you voted against God, the Flag and Motherhood."

Pettis stated he had recently received a rating from a group that purposes to represent senior citizens. "In looking over the votes they used, I noticed a strong similarity between the so-called senior citizen group choices and those used by the AFL-CIO. My office checked and found the organization alleging to represent the interests of the elderly was directly tied to the labor unions.

"That cleared up the mystery of why they considered my support for providing youth differential provisions in the minimum wage law as a vote against senior citizens," he said.

Pettis called the "so-called senior citizen group rating 'particularly galling'."

"One of my personal priorities since coming to Congress has been to improve senior citizen programs and benefits. I cosponsored the Older Americana Act. This group says I voted against it! I introduced the legisiation passed by Congress this year to provide an 11-percent cost-of-living increase for Social Security recipients, I voted for the 10-per cent increase in veterans' benefits that passed, and I've introduced and continued to work for bills to remove outside earnings limitations on Social Security and V.A. pensions, to improve Medicare as well as veterans' health care programs, to prohibit age discrimination in employment, credit card issuance, etc. etc. etc.," Pettis stated.

Pettis called other ratings just as bad.

"Last year some conservation group gave me a low rating. Two or three of the votes they said I voted "wrong" on involved my supporting flood control programs. If we didn't have flood control, half of San Bernardino County would have been washed away years ago. Yet, because I support flood control, I'm 'against' the environment.

"Even worse, I know of at least one group's ratings that contained information that was flat out wrong. They included a "vote" on legislation that had never even come to the floor for consideration!

"If you really want to get down to cases, one of my House Colleagues employs a staff member who is also on the ratings board for one of these groups. When votes were chosen to make up this particular group's rating, the staff man found his boss had voted "wrong" on one of the issues. That vote was thrown out and another vote that particular Congressman had voted "right" on was used instead.

"I think it's plain to see these published rating systems are twisted to suit the motives and special interests of the hierarchy of an individual group. That's the reason most of the amendment votes are used.

"All in all, the 'ratings game' is misleading, it's unscientific, and it's a poor standard for intelligent, informed citizens to use in judging just how well they are being represented," Pettis stated.

Mikesell seeks freeway funds

In action requested by Second District Supervisor Daniel D. Mikesell, the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors has adopted a resolution seeking extension of the Foothill Freeway beyond its current terminus in San Dimas.

Mikesell said that on a recent trip to Sacramento with the Foothill Freeway Association he had discovered $46 million in primary priority funds which the State has not budgeted for specific projects.

The Second District Supervisor said a portion of this money could be used to extend the Foothill Freeway on to Interstate Route 10 in Redlands or at least to the County Line.

The resolution adopted by the Board requested that the California State Department of Transportation designate the funds for such use.

Four-stars to local motel

In the 1974 "Mobile Travel Guide," Uplander has been awarded a 4-Star rating, signifying "outstanding." This year editors of the Guide have awarded 4 stars to only 268 restaurants, ho tels, motels and resorts — fewer than one percent of the 21,000 establishments listed in the seven-volume yearly series.

According to Mobile Oil Corp., which sponsors publication of the Guide, Uplander received its high rating based on detailed inspections by trained field representatives, anonymous visits by special consultants, and corroboration of its quality by readers of the Mobile Travel Guides who had been guests at Uplander.

Uplander was judged to be outstanding because it provides exemplary service to its guests, has spacious well-appointed rooms and public areas, outstanding housekeeping and maintenance staffs and a tradition of quality and management well above the usual. An establishment such as Uplander is distinguished by the manner in which its employees at every level work as a skilled team to ensure that each individual guest enjoys a happy and memorable experience.

Each rated establishment listed in Mobile Travel Guide has been inspected by a field representative during the 12 months prior to publication of the annual series. During this visit, a random selection of rooms is subjected to detailed examination. The inspector checks the quality of bedding, cleanliness, quietness, maintenance, spaciousness and looks for such conveniences as comfortable chairs and blackout drapes. The field representative's reports also include observations of public areas, recreational equipment and the attitude of management and staff.

The formal field reports are supplemented by those from frequent travelers who provide details of their experiences to the Guide's editors. These consultants are careful never to make known their association with Mobile Travel Guide.

To insure objectivity and fairness, listings in Mobile Travel Guide are edited and rated with one to five stars by an independent consulting firm, which also conducts the inspections. Listings in the guide are free, with no charge or fee of any kind to the establishments included. Objectivity is further enhanced by the fact that the Guide accepts no advertising.

The 1974 edition of Mobile Travel Guide contains up-to-date descriptions of 48 states, 4,000 cities and towns and 8,000 tourist attractions as well as the comprehensive listings of restaurants and accommodations. A wide variety of prices, facilities and interests is represented in the books.

Preliminary CC budget accepted

A Chaffey College preliminary budget of $11,120,341 was accepted last week for study and review by the board of trustees.

The fiscal program for the year ahead is subject to revisions in later board sessions.

As it now stands, the proposed budget exceeds the current budget of $8,826,776 by $2,293,565.

A key factor in developing the new budget is an anticipated state apportionment of $3,652,743 compared to this year's $2,635,083.

The total assessed valuation is projected at $736,869,274 for 1974-1975. The current assessed valuation is $705,067,760.

Moonbows at night

Rainbows by moonlight, called moonbows, occur after showers on nights when the moon is bright but not too high in the sky. Such lunar bows are periodically visible in the spray of certain waterfalls, such as the Cumberland Falls in southern Kentucky.

Disclosure-ruling confusion persists

Local city councilmen aren't being required this month to disclose their finances but some are doing so. The majority are not.

Challengers in state and county races have had to file financial dislosure statements. Incumbents won't have to.

A confused state of affairs surrounds the dislosure law passed this year by the state legislature — because of a decision by the state Supreme Court late last month to consider the constitutionality of the new law.

On March 28, the Supreme Court ordered the suspension of the disclosure law until its constitutionality is determined, a decision expected sometime in July.

Until the Supreme Court's suspension of the law, city, county and state officials were preparing to make their economic interests public in April.

Now, local city councilmen are divided on whether to voluntarily disclose.

"I have no qualms about the filing," said Montclair Mayor Harold Hayes, who related he had filed his financial statement last week despite the disclosure law's no longer being in effect.

business. Insurance men, attorneys and doctors are among those in public office who have complained that the new disclosure law violates their confidentiality with their clients.

The Nevada County Superior Court ruling against the constitutionality of the law — the ruling now pending in the Supreme Court — held that the disclosure law violates a person's right of privacy.

In contrast to Mayor Hayes, Upland Mayor Abner Haldeman, who has been opposed to the disclosure law on the right-to-privacy basis, said he wouldn't file a financial statement now that he isn't required to.

"I don't think the disclosure law is necessary," commented Haldeman, who recently publicly announced he owns property — a grove he has operated for 14 years — within the city of Upland.

Ontario City Councilman Joe Aime, who described himself as a "long opponent of this disclosure law," explained his reasons for not filing a statement of his economic interests.

"I don't believe a person should be compelled to disclose what he's doing or how he's doing it," Aime said. "I don't like to snoop into anyone else's business and I don't want to have anyone snooping into mine." Aime added he has "nothing to conceal" and owns no property in the city except his house and a house he rents out.

"It's the principle of the thing," Aime said, referring to an office holder's right of privacy.

Gus Ramos, a colleague of Aime on the Ontario council, stated, "I was in favor of the law so I'll probably turn my financial statement in."

Hal Bailin, an attorney who sits on the Upland City Council, stated he might send in a declaration of his finances but would not list any of his clients.

Upland Councilwoman Ina Petokas commented that she "would file but there would be nothing to report" since she has no holdings and no income except her council salary.

She advocated council members' filing the financial disclosure statements.

Another effect of the suspension of the disclosure law has been to exempt incumbents in legislative and supervisorial races from disclosure while their challengers disclosed at the time of filing their nomination papers early in March.

The discrepancy doesn't exist in the 60th Assembly District race because there is no incumbent but the situation could occur in the two local supervisorial races.

However, a source within the secretary of state's office has indicated action may be taken to require the incumbents in state and county races to disclose this month.

The disclosure law would have required officeholders to reveal their finances once a year each April and non-incumbent candidates at the time of filing for election.

Candidates and incumbents would have to reveal all business interests and real estate investments of more than $1,000 and any source of income greater than $250.

The state legislature sensed trouble in the courts over the disclosure law (a similar law was struck down by the state Supreme Court in 1970) and recently attempted to amend the bill.

The bill was amended but the amendment was not carried as urgency legislation, but rather as regular legislation, which does not become law until the legislature adjourns in the fall. Consequently, the Nevada County court case went to the state Supreme Court and disclosure has become optional for the time being.

Clear skies and warm spring weather provided the backdrop recently for the West End Opera Guild's Opera Preview and Aperitivo held at the north Upland home of Mrs. William F. Karow.

Guests were welcomed to the afternoon event by Mrs. Karow, the hostess, who received with Mrs. Joyce W. Merrell, guild president, and Mrs. Joseph Piscioneri, preview chairman.

Mrs. Gerald Wechsler handled the guest book and distributed name tags designed by Mrs. Phillip White.

As guests sipped wine beside the pool of the hillside home, they were able to admire a spectacular view of the valley and Mt. Baldy. Inside, spring flowers were in abundance as guests toured the spacious home.

Serving the aperitivo at poolside was Mrs. Michael Biane with the Mmes. Anthony Colonna, Fred Freehling, Salvatore Gullo, John Henderson and William O'Connor assisting. The punch bowl was arranged by Desiree Womack, who was assisted by the Mmes. Richard Davidson, A. J. Hawkins Jr., Richard Hester and Kenneth Kuchar. Mrs. David Goetsch served as beverage chairman.

Professor Christ Lengefeld of Scripps College, Claremont, presented the preview of "Il Trovatore" following his introduction by Mrs. W. G. Stahl. Describing the opera as a "gripping, passionate drama of superstitution and power that is misused," Lengefeld viewed the work through the dramatic musical characterizations of each of the major roles.

The themes of evil and fate, which pervade the opera, were related by Lengefeld to the use of the key of D-flat major. The key is associated continually with the wicked Count de Luna, but also appears in other fateful situations as when Leonora takes poison to escape her promised marriage to the count. On the other hand, Lengefeld described the musical themes of Leonora as, "breathless and exciting with sweeping melodies . . . a nobility of line."

The professor's presentation was integrated with taped portions of the opera and, on occasion, a piano rendition of major themes.

The opera, "Il Trovatore," will be presented at 8 p.m. April 20 in Gardiner Spring Auditorium, Ontario, by the West End Opera Association.

Tickets to the opera were sold during the afternoon by Mrs. Phillip S. Larson and Mrs. William Waggener.

Mrs. Lee Beck served as food chairman, while Mrs. Thomas W. Jones was tea chairman. Assisting them were Mrs. William Beck, Mrs. Daniel W. Maher, Mrs. David Wildrick and Mary Maher.

Swiss fame for helping doesn't go for tourists

By DONALD W. REYNOLDS
President Donrey Media Group

Bern, Switzerland — "The Swiss — there is no getting away from it — are outrageous people and the rest of humanity feels deep resentment towards them. They have not been involved in wars for over a century; they have no outlet to the sea, founded no empires, and still are prosperous and rich. The Swiss franc has the arrogance of being a much better currency than the dollar. That is why they are called dull, unintelligent, uninteresting, a nation of waiters. The truth is they have behaved like civilized people in a lunatic world, and that cannot be easily forgiven."

George Nekes thus summed up some of the specific virtues of the Swiss and the general perversity of the human race. This British humorist at least gives us a basis from which to start an anlysis of this peculiar kind of country.

The Swiss have a reputation for helping their neighbors — and assisting humanity. This they do — and the price tag is so obvious that it shows in every transaction.

Red Cross movements, world health services, international do-gooder bureaucracies, united nations dreamers and so called peace conferences are held all over the country, almost momentarily — all to the benefit of the Swiss tourist functionaries.

My introduction to this country approximately twice the size of the State of Massachusetts was typical. I disembarked from the Swissair DC-10 in Zurich for the airline bus to Bern. Presented my ticket to the conductor and was promptly informed the bus fare was $7.50 — to be paid in advance, cash, no air credit cards — although Swissair operated the bus line. I paid — and during the two hour ride had the opportunity of closely checking my ticket — obviously the bus fare was included. With the evidence of the two tickets I prevailed on the conductor to give me back my overpayment. A surly sour growl accompanied the refund.

Arriving in Bern I hauled my bags to a waiting cab — no porters, but they do provide carts for transferring your luggage — unions will not permit taxi drivers to handle baggage. After an all night flight and a seven hour time change I didn't examine the buildings too closely that surrounded the new station under construction. After I had loaded the bags, the driver made a U-turn and deposited me and my bags across the street in front of my destination, the Hotel Schweizerhof. After personally unloading the two bags I paid the $4.50 that this five minutes of Swiss service cost.

During my formative years my linguistic education was sadly neglected and I'm afraid that if my English conversation isn't understood, my only recourse is to talk louder. I'll assure you that this does not work. And despite its reputation as a tourist oriented country, there is less English understood than in the unexplored portions of Afghanistan.

Of course, the Swiss, being the realists they are, may have decided that with the collapsing American dollar and British pound there is small point in catering to the Anglo Saxon contingent. In any event, I'm hoarse and about out of gestures. I'm also lost most of the time, and find it impossible to select much merchandise with my point and grab system even if my vanishing dollar-bought Swiss francs could pay for my souveniors.

Zurich, Bern and Geneva certainly don't make up all of Switzerland, but they are enough of a sample to make me look forward to Austria tomorrow.

Chicago, Ill.—A pro football player tells how he overcame hearing loss. So does a U.S. Senator and other Americans you read about or see on television every day.

Each tells his own story of his fight against hearing loss in a booklet prepared by the Better Hearing Institute and available free from the Beltone Electronics Corporation.

"They Overcame Hearing Loss" gives the personal experiences of twelve famous people. One was born with progressive deafness. Others faced a hearing loss caused by childhood disease, noisy surroundings or gradual deterioration.

The booklet containing their twelve success stories in the fight against hearing loss is offered without cost or obligation. To obtain your copy, just write Dept. 9623, Beltone Electronics Corporation, 4201 W. Victoria Street, Chicago, Illinois 60646.

Why is your electric bill up?

Because the cost of oil is up.

Even though you've cut down on your use of electricity, your bill may still be up. Naturally, you're concerned. So are we.

The main reason for the sharp rise in Edison customers' bills is the spiraling cost of foreign oil. To produce electricity in our generating plants, we use a cleaner-burning, low-sulphur oil imported mostly from Indonesia. It's expensive, but it's required to meet regulations set by local air pollution control districts.

Just four years ago we paid $2.22 per barrel. In November 1973, we paid $7.53. This February it was $13.54. And some utilities have paid almost twice that much.

The price of oil is a major expense we can't control. That's determined by foreign, oil producing governments. Should the price we pay drop, we'll pass these lower costs on to you.

Meanwhile, we'll continue to cut all expenses we can control. Economy programs are in force right now at Edison. So are rigid cost controls. And we'll continue to do everything else possible to hold down the price you pay for electricity.

You can help by conserving electricity now. And using less electricity will save you money, too.

For some 70 ways to conserve, send for our free Conservation booklet. It's important. Do it now. Write: "Conservation," Edison, P.O. Box 800, Rosemead, CA 91770.

Defense in YTS riot case rests

The defense suddenly rested its case Wednesday in the trial of seven California Youth Training School wards and a counselor who were indicted by a grand jury on charges connected with a racial riot at the Chino institution.

The case, which is one of the largest in county history in terms of the number of defendants on trial, originally involved nine wards. One of the nine, Craig Bennett Lee, will be tried separately, and the other, Virgil Gene Dunkentell, pleaded guilty to one count of assault with a deadly weapon and has been returned to YTS.

Eight wards were hospitalized as a result of the July 9, 1973, incident.

Walter Hunkeler, attorney for Kincy, rested his case earlier Wednesday, following the conclusion of testimony by YTS counselor Clyde Gartung, the other seven attorneys rested their cases.

Judge James E. Cunningham Sr. continued the trial to Monday for rebuttal and closing arguments at the request of Dept. Dist. Atty. William Parker. Parker said a number of legal problems and jury instructions could be worked out today.

Judge Cunningham told the jurors that it appears the case will be submitted to them for deliberation by next Wednesday.

On the witness stand, counselor Gartung repeatedly made conflicting statements in relation to his direct testimony and the report he filed after the incident.

The confusion revolved around Gartung's statement in his report that the gate to a football field area was open and wards were in the area of the football field. In direct testimony, he said the gate was closed and Wagstaff opened it and let the wards out.

Gartung repeatedly changed his stories about which was the truth, his report or the direct testimony. He also said he didn't recall whether wards were in the football field area on several occasions when he was questioned by defense attorneys.

Under prosecution questioning, Gartung said he didn't mention in his report that Wagstaff opened the gate because he didn't want to make any statement that would be considered prejudicial.

Bank of America program

Student semi-final award winners

Area II semi-final winners in Bank of America's $85,500 California Community College Awards program were announced this week.

Winners and categories in which they won were: Cruz Saavedra, San Pedro, L. A. Harbor College, business; Robert Keeran, 1637 N. Laurel, Upland, Chaffey College, business; Keith Deans, 1458 N. Euclid, Ontario, Chaffey College, science and engineering; Richard Schneider, Whittier, Rio Hondo College, science and engineering; Nancy Bolding, Apple Valley, Victor Valley College, social science, humanities; Jose Hermocillo, 1428 Primrose St., Upland, Chaffey College, social science, humanities; Renee Lovato, 1303 W. I St. No. 5, Ontario, Chafefy College, technical - vocational; and Jo Anna Laakso, 225 Montara St., Victorville, Barstow College, technical - vocational.

The eight students, two each from the fields of business, technical, social science-humanities, and science and engineering, now advance to the Southern California finals May 1 at the Los Angeles Hilton Hotel to compete for the four $2,000 first place awards. There will also be four $1,000 second place awards and four $500 third place awards. Area winners are assured at least $250.

At the recent area competition, held at Mt. San Antonio College in Walnut, four students from each of the 10 participating community colleges appeared before a panel of business and civic leaders to discuss an unannounced subject related to their field of study. Community colleges in the Area II competition:

Barstow, Chaffey, Compton, Crafton Hills (Yucaipa), Long Beach City, Los Angeles Harbor, Mt. San Antonio, Rio Hondo, San Bernardino Valley and Victor Valley.

The program, in its fourth year, means cash awards for nearly 400 California community college sophomores. It is an outgrowth of the statewide bank's former Business Awards, and Man and Woman of the Year Awards which financially benefitted more than 2,800 students in 18 years.

The bank, aided by a committee of educators headed by Dr. John Johnson, president of Santa Ana College, designed the Community College Awards to include more academic areas, involve more students and increase the amount of cash awards.

Along with the Community College Awards, the bank also has a broad program for outstanding high school students. The long-standing Bank of America Achievement Awards have distributed nearly $2 million in cash awards since 1948.

The Area II selection committee was chaired by Dr. Raymond F. Ellerman, district superintendent, San Bernardino Community College District, and coordinated by Dan Bowen, manager of the West Pomona Bank of Americ. Judges included:

Upland construction hits $3 million mark

Building permits for structures valued at over $3 million were issued in Upland during the first quarter of this year.

The largest number of building permits were issued for single family homes. Valued at $1.7 million, 61 dwelling units were granted permits during the three month period.

Two commercial establishments, with a $76,700 total value, were also granted permits by the city building department.

Permits for 34 apartment units, with a $750,000 estimated value, also received permit clearance.

Including approvals of additions or alterations to existing structures, 242 permits were issued from Jan. 1 to March 31.

Inland Science Fair award winners

Students from Riverside, Barstow, Alta Loma and Rialto won sweepstakes honors in the Inland Science Fair, which concluded last week at California State College, San Bernardino.

Winners were announced at an awards ceremony. Honors were given in the senior division (grades 10-12) and the junior division (grades 7-9).

Top winner in the physical sciences area of the senior division was Philip L. Engelauf of Riverside with a project entitled "Compensating for Wind Effects on Rocket Altitudes."

In the biological sciences, the senior sweepstakes winner was Stephen W. Bickler of Barstow, who studied "Water, Energy and Electrolyte Metabolism in the Desert Wood Rat."

The two ninth graders who took highest honors in the junior division were:

Dana Fagan of Alta Loma, in the physical sciences area with a demonstration of the effects of low speed aerodynamics; and Brian E. Derrick of Rialto, in the biological sciences, with a study of embroyonic immunization using mumps virus.

Award winners in the senior division, physical science, and their projects were: Daryl K. Justice, Chaffey High, first place, Electronic Analysis of Sea Water; and Raymond R. Leos, Alta Loma High, first place, National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA), American Institute of Aeronautics and Astronautics, (AIAA), Naval Fleet Missile Systems Analysis and Evalution Group (NFMSAEG) awards for project on Possible Magnetic Effects on Lunar Crater Distribution.

Junior division winners in physical sciences and their projects were: Dana Fagan, Alta Loma High, sweepstakes, AIAA and NASA awards, Demonstration into the Effects of Low Speed Aerodynamics; Melinda A. Pure, Kolb Junior High, Rialto, first place, Pickett slide rule special award, NFMSAEG award, Probability; Joseph Garcia, Resurrection Academy, Fontana, first place, American Meteorological Society (AMS) award, Weather Forecasting.

Also, Dale F. O'Neil, Alta Loma Junior High, first place, Does Temperature Affect Porosity?; and Victor S. Haglund, Norco Junior High, NFMSAEG award, Probability.

Gypsy girls still sold to high bidder

Despite women's lib, the Gypsy tradition of selling daughters into wedlock still thrives in the United States.

And furthermore, the Gypsy girls don't seem to mind going to the highest bidder, according to Angie Schaefer of Chino, whose sister, Carmen Torres, married the late Gypsy King Leo George in 1938.

George died recently in Houston, and he will be mourned for a full year as befitting a Gypsy king.

Mrs. Schaefer and her husband Don will accompany a Gypsy caravan from Oregon and Washington on a pilgrimage to pay their respects to George's family in Houston.

Mrs. Schaefer said Gypsies will sell their daughters only to other Gypsies, with the girl going to the highest bidder.

"A beautiful girl will bring $2,000 to $3,000," Mrs. Schaefer said, adding that "if the girl is unhappy with her new husband she is free to return home."

She said the new Gypsy bride serves as her mother-in-law's housekeeper for one year and then she makes her own home.

"The girls don't mind being sold into wedlock. It's just their way of life."

Mrs. Schaefer, who spent six months traveling with Gypsies in a circus as a young girl, said the younger Gypsies still travel about the country a great deal.

She said the Gypsies used to travel with the carnivals but with the decline in popularity of the road shows, they have given it up as unprofitable.

Mrs. Schaefer, who described the Gypsies as "rich people," said, "Fortune-telling brings in most of the money."

She said the Gypsies usually travel in cars in groups of about three families.

"Usually they rent a house in a business district and set up shop. The wives tell fortunes and the men do handiwork. A good fortune teller can earn up to $1,000 dollars per session, and many have repeat customers."

Mrs. Schaefer said that as far as she knows her sister, whose Gypsy name is Dino, is the only non-Gypsy to marry into the clan.

Until his death, George was one of four major regional kings who rule the 100,000 Gypsies in the United States. George was buried Wednesday after a nightlong wake by 1,000 of his subjects.

Joe Franks, one of the directors of the southwest clan, said the followers will continue the pilgrimage to Houston for at least six weeks to pay respect to George's family.

MONTCLAIR CANCER DRIVE — Lou Catalano, chairperson of the American Cancer Society Drive in Montclair, and Mrs. Arthur Novelli, local information chairperson, post a sign to kick off the 1974 campaign in Montclair, set to start April 17. This year's goal is $3,100.

Scarcity reported elsewhere

No chlorine shortage in West End

West End government agencies say they are not having trouble getting enough chlorine for water and sewage treatment although a federal study shows scores of American cities are having that problem.

Robert W. Thompson, office manager for Chino Basin Municipal Water District, this morning said the only problem experienced by his agency so far is that it can no longer get a guaranteed chlorine price for a full year.

Instead, the price is subject to negotiation every three months.

He said chlorine suppliers have never warned the district that they may not be able to deliver needed supplies.

The district used four tons of chlorine every 7 to 10 days to treat sewage from the West End.

In Ontario, City Public Services Director Dennis M. Wilkins said no problem has been experienced in getting chlorine for water treatment.

He said it appears that there might be some difficulty later in the summer in getting chlorine for the city's swimming pools, which he said have a lower priority than treatment of the city's water supply, but that the city so far has been able to obtain sufficient chlorine for the pools.

Harry A. Rohrbach, water superintendent in Upland, said getting chlorine to treat the city's water supply has not been a problem.

In Washington D.C., the U. S. Environmental Protection Agency said the problem of getting sufficient chlorine, already troubling scores of cities, could get worse this summer and appears unlikely to ease until early 1975.

The EPA said it and state agencies have been working on voluntary ways to assure adequate supplies for city water supplies, but a spokesman said a mandatory allocation program which is pending in Congress may still be necessary.

The EPA study showed that a total of 74 cities experienced shortages of chlorine or other water treatment chemicals during the eight months ending Jan. 31 of this year.

The energy crisis, growing industrial use of chlorine, transportation problems and a scarcity of chlorine containers were among factors blamed for the shortage.

Waste is wasted

If burned in power plants, the nearly 3 billion tons of waste produced in the United States every year would generate more than half of today's national output of electricity.

Two to teach skill of being creative with needle, thread

Art comes in many forms . . . brushes and oils, brushes and watercolors, a camera and film, molded clay and sculptured bronze.

Betty Miller and Bobbi Arjo have joined together to put art into the skill of sewing. They are going to teach the skill of being creative with a needle and thread and with a sewing machine.

Free sewing classes in making creative clothing will be held at the Magnolia Park Recreation Center, 651 W 15th St., Upland, from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. each Thursday for eight weeks starting April 18.

Those interested may sign up for the class on opening day.

Sponsoring the creative sewing classes is the Chaffey College Community Services which brings many educational opportunities into the community without charge.

Betty Miller is a native of Upland and attended Scripps College. She has been painting with oils and brushes since childhood. Currently, she teaches a painting class on Monday nights for the Upland Recreation Department and has taught numerous classes under the sponsorship of the Chaffey Community Art Association of which she is a member. Mrs. Miller has exhibited in four juried shows and in many places throughout the West End, particularly at the Gallery Theatre, Ontario, where the art works are changed for each new production.

Always interested in sewing and having become adept at the art of collage . . . that is when an artistic composition of materials and objects are pasted on a surface . . . Betty Miller decided to combine her collage ideas with sewing. She has created several clever dresses trimmed with original collages of materials put onto the areas of the outfits with simple stitchery. In the sewing class, Mrs. Miller hopes to inspire the sewers to be totally creative by teaching a combination of skills. She wants to help each student with the making of clothing to use lines which enhance their figures and to learn the best styles for figure problems. She also wants to help each seamstress with the use of colors best suited to the individual.

Bobbie Arjo has been teaching sewing and working with the skills of sewing for many years. She is originally from San Luis Obispo and now lives in Upland. Her plans with the creative sewing classes will be to stress color coordination and the skill of clothing construction.

She is a graduate of California State University, San Luis Obispo, and has taught sewing in the adult education evening classes at Chaffey High School for three and a-half years. She also is teaching sewing for the Upland Recreation Department, and has taught several other sewing classes for the Chaffey College Community Service.

There are no requirements for the creative sewing class except for a basic knowledge of how to sew and use a sewing machine. The class will be limited to 30 members.

The two women hope to give sewing a new twist, a new excitement in using creative ideas whether working on a pair of gardening slacks or a dress for a summer party.

Chino herd tested for blood disease

While Alta Dena Dairy officials waited for test results on 1,934 Chino cows today, a spokesman for the dairy ripped critics of the firm and their attitudes toward raw milk.

Blood test results on the 1,934 cows at the Alta Dena Dairy production yard on Pine Avenue just east of Grove Avenue near Chino, are expected later today.

The testing, done by the State of California, consisted of routine blood tests, explained Director of Public Relations for Alta Dena Dairy, Paul Virgin.

"We were doing routine blood testing when this whole thing started," said Virgin. "Our veterinarian found possible brucellosis in the blood. He found it in the blood of the cow, not in the milk that cow produced," Virgin emphasized.

At that time, on March 8, one cow was classified as a "hot" cow, said Virgin, and two others were suspect.

In all, six cows were sent to slaughter because of possible disease. Autopsies on these six cows "showed no positive identification of brucellosis," he said. He noted that all six cows were slaughtered and sold to the general public for consumption.

Virgin said brucellosis has popped up in 40 or 50 herds in California. In each case, the suspect cows were found to be out-of-state cows, he added.

"It all stems from allowing unvaccinated animals into the state," claimed Virgin. "Everyone of the six cows in question were purchased by the dairy and brought into the state," he said.

"The same thing has happened to many unsuspecting dairymen in California where they have purchased animals they thought were properly vaccinated and were not," he added.

Virgin pointed out that 182 cases of brucellosis were reported in 1972, according to brucellosis surveillance reports.

"Only three of those were related to the consumption of raw milk in the United States," he said. "More brucellosis is spread by swine or pork products than any other source," he said.

Meat handlers, butchers and cutters, are the most susceptible to it, "it's an occupational hazard of any meat cutter," he said.

Virgin doesn't feel the Chino herd will show any positive results. "I feel confident they will not find any infected cows in the Chino herd whatsoever," he said.

He said if the six slaughtered cows had been re-bled 30 days from the original test, they would probably not have been labeled suspect cows.

"Those suspect cows were not positive cows," he said. "If a cow has the disease, it will shed the organism into the blood long before it shows up in the milk," he added.

"Other herds wait until they find brucellosis in the milk before they check the cow. We've always checked the cow before the milk," he said.

"There's not a better inspected milk or a closer supervised herd than where companies produce raw certified milk," he claimed.

Certified raw milk is produced under a set of rigid rules and regulations established by a team of medical physicians, said Virgin.

Among the requirements is a physical examination of all dairy workers on the dairy each month.

"Our men go through throat cultures, stool tests and complete physical examinations each month," said Virgin. In addition, yearly tuberculosis tests are required.

"San Bernardino County is the nearest county that requires a skin test for tuberculosis for dairy workers," said Virgin, "and that's all they require."

"Certified milk is the best inspected milk on the market," he continued. "There has never been any brucellosis found in our milk at any time," he added.

Open house scheduled at school

The Claremont Collegiate School is planning an open house at its Padua Avenue campus on Thursday, April 18, from 1 - 3p.m. Both parents and their children are invited and will be given an opportunity to meet students and faculty and to take a tour of the campus.

Claremont Collegiate School is a non-profit, coeducational, non-sectarian day school that was founded in 1892. At present there are about 50 students enrolled in grades 7 through 12. Collegiate offers a college-preparatory course for all of its students and has a student-teacher ration of about 5 to 1 and classes that vary in size from as few as 3 students to not more than 15.

The school is located on a 10-acre campus about one mile north of Foothill Blvd. at 3105 N. Padua Ave. in Claremont. For further information about the open house or the school, please call 624-1634.

Southern California Gas Co. and an affiliate paid more than $1.2 million in second installment property taxes to San Bernardino County this week, according to F. B. Wilson, district manager for the gas company.

With the second installment, the utilities' total property tax payment to the county for 1973-74 amounted to over $2.5 million, Lynch said. The affiliate, Pacific Lighting Service Co., owns gas transmission and storage facilities which provide gas supplies to the gas company.

Jim: Some hands are so simple when you look at all the cards. West could have opened a heart and ruined South's slam right away, but West didn't want to lead from a jack. He elected to open a trump."

Oswald: "South looked over dummy quickly and saw that at the worst his slam would depend on a heart finesse. Then he set about to improve matters."

Jim: "He played two rounds of trumps and led a diamond to dummy's ace. East who had been paying no real attention followed with the four of diamonds and South had developed his extra chance. He cashed his king of diamonds and all the clubs. Then he played his last diamond. East had to win the trick and surrender the rest to South."

Oswald: "East's failure to unblock on the first diamond was costly indeed. West was very bitter about the play, but we feel West was a trifle unfair. South had played the hand in a manner designed to give East the best chance to go wrong and East had not seen his danger."

If parks, bond act approved

Windfall for county

SAN BERNARDINO — William Penn Mott, State Director of Parks and Beaches, told the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors Monday that San Bernardino and Riverside Counties should receive a larger share of funds from the $250 million bond act, which will be on the June 4 ballot.

Mott said 15 per cent of the Los Angeles County money should go to San Bernardino and Riverside Counties from the parks and recreation bond act, if it is approved by the voters. The bond act will be proposition one on the ballot.

Mott said San Bernardino and Riverside Counties get the spillover from Los Angeles County because Los Angeles County has only one half acre per 1,000 residents. He said L.A. County has very little area for parks and recreation areas.

Mott said a destination percentage should have been included in the legislation but he has been unable to get the Legislature to agree. He said L.A. County does not agree and wants even more money than it will get.

The director said the distribution of the funds is laid out in the legislation and he has no control over distribution.

Mott said he knows of no organized opposition to the bond act but he said he is concerned about apathy.

He said it will be important to spend the money from the bond act rapidly because construction costs are going up rapidly. He suggested that the county should select projects that can be completed in the next fiscal year.

Mott said the major land acquisition of this county will be at Mitchell's Caverns near Needles. He said the state will spend money at Silverwood and in the Hesperia area also.

Chairman Nancy E. Smith said she is disappointed that the county will receive only $2.8 million from the bond act because this county provides a major part of the recreation for Southern California.

County Regional Parks Director Gary Patton said this county should cooperate with Riverside County, particularly at Prado Park.

Supervisor Robert O. Townsend said a worthwhile project for county cooperation would be some historical ruins in Riverside County at Prado Park. He noted that a cave where Joaquin Murietta allegedly hid out is also a worthwhile project.

During a luncheon for Mott, Congressman George Brown, Jr., and supervisors from the two counties, Mott said the state expects to acquire four major off-road areas, two in Southern California and two in Northern California. He said the two Southern California areas are El Mirage Dry Lake in this county and surplus Army land near Palm Springs in Riverside County.

Mott said a $2.1 million bill for trails in the Legislature is important because of the great interest in bicycling and hiking. He said a program of youth hostels is included. Although there was a great deal of confusion over the youth hostels because many thought they would be hippie communes, he said this has finally been cleared up.

He said other programs involve horse trails and developing rivers for boating, rafts, and other water sports.

Congressman Brown said the federal role is not as large in the field of recreation and park as it is in other areas.

Foothill National celebration

Orange contest winners

Ben J. Kruger of Upland has won a color TV set as the first prize in the Great Orange Guessing Contest conducted by Foothill National Bank to celebrate the opening of the bank's new office at 915 W. Foothill Blvd. in Upland.

Contests were asked to guess the number of oranges piled high on a restored 1927 Model T truck which was parked in front of the bank from the formal opening on March 30 to April 13. Entrants guessed numbers as high as 7,000,950 and as low at 172.

Kruger's winning guess was 5,796, which was closest to the correct number of 5,804, according to Rod R. Bain, vice president and manager of the bank.

Others winners, all of Upland, are Milton Stone who won the family camping outfit; Martha Hart, a TV set; Seth Miller, stereo system; and Arthur L. Johnson, an exercise bicycle.

Also winners were Joe Griffin, golf clubs, bag and cart; Douglas William DeYoung, lawn croquet set; Madalyn Ballenger, lady's bowling ball and bag; Nicholas Tricinella, men's bowling ball and bag.

Serious contestants brought tape measures and pocket calculators, presumably to measure tht total volume and divide by the volumn of a single orange.

To protect the contents from pilferage, the bank secured the load with chicken wire fencing. A transparent plastic wrapper was kept handy in case of inclement weather. It was used once, on March 30.

Over 80 cases of oranges were used. To minimize deterioration, the load was replaced after the first week. Even so, only a dozen oranges were discarded after weeklong exposure to the elements.

La Verne opens campus

LA VERNE — Members of the community are invited to come and "explore" the futuristic new 'Super Tents' and take part in open house activities scheduled from 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday on the La Verne College campus, Paul Kampmeier, director of admission announced.

The afternoon's events will open on the second level of the Student Center with a 2 p.m. welcome address by Stephen C. Morgan, assistant to the president.

Instructor will visit Romania

Mary Boldi, fifth-sixth grade teacher at Mariposa School in Ontario, has been selected by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare in Washington, D.C., to make a trip to Romania with a group of psychologists, pediatricians and educators.

The group will leave May 12 and return June 2.

Purpose of the trip, Mrs. Boldi said, will be to study health, education and welfare in Romania, with emphasis on education.

Mrs. Boldi, who joined the Ontario-Montclair School District as a full-time teacher in September 1972, said she believes her selection to make the trip was based on the fact that she speaks the Romanian language.

Peg-Leg Smith and the Strange Black Pebbles

Thomas L. Smith was born in Garrard County, Kentucky, in 1801. He became a Missouri riverboat man, a ferocious fighter, a fearless adventurer.

Perhaps tiring of the "crowds" of settled America, he took up fur trapping in the vast wilds of what are now the states of New Mexico, Colorado and Arizona. While in the Grand River country he was shot in the left leg by an Indian. He asked his companions to amputate his leg, but they were afraid to do so. Having a distaste for a slow death by gangrene poisoning, he took a knife and cut off his own leg. Surprisingly, he lived, fashioned a palo verde peg for himself, and stumped into the history of the West. His courage won him great prestige with the Utes, and he lived with them for many years. They called him Wa-be-to-co.

Sometime between 1829 and 1836 Smith and some companions forded the Colorado and headed across the desert for the Mexican pueblos along the coast. When they became lost, Peg-Leg climbed the tallest of three closely grouped buttes. After getting his bearings he saw some odd black pebbles, and put a few in his pocket. Time passed and Smith found himself in San Francisco, where he had the pebbles assayed. They were almost pure gold, with a black encrustation. From this point on the mystery of where Peg-Leg's mine lay takes a hundred different routes. There was no mine, really — merely the exposed nuggets of what must have been a fabulously rich vein.

But Peg-Leg never found it again. Neither has anyone else, although professional and amateur prospectors have scurried about the desert wastes for more than 125 years. Some authorities say the lost lode was in a valley called Holcomb in the San Bernardino Mountains, which contained three small buttes and a fairly rich layer of alluvial gold just a few inches under the topsoil. All of this was grubbed up by eager prospectors nearly 100 years ago. There's no real proof Smith's find was there, though. Perhaps it's still waiting to be discovered!

Along with his trusted Utes, Smith spent the next 20 years stealing horses from the Californios. In 1848 he carried out the greatest horse-stealing raid of all time, in which prized stock from San Diego to Santa Clara was swept up. Eyewitnesses told of a dust cloud visible 30 miles away as 5,000 horses were sent racing up the Cajon Pass. Some of these horses were shipped as far as Galveston, Texas, and on to the West Indies. Peg-Leg and his pals found horse stealing far more profitable than fur trapping or hunting for a golden butte. They didn't stop stealing horses until California came under the American flag. Smith lived mostly in San Francisco after that, and died in 1862. And the last of the wild horse herds, formed all those years ago by horses that couldn't match the fierce pace of the Indian outriders, was exterminated by hunters in Apple Valley in 1948.

Have you thought of looking for Peg-Leg's butte?

It could be a marvelous pastime — as long as you make sure that's all it becomes. Because looking for a lost mine that untold thousands have been unable to find is no way to prepare for the future. It's a lot more satisfying to know that your savings are growing steadily and safely . . . to know you have the brand of security and growth that comes with a savings account at Upland Savings.

Upland Savings is the largest California chartered savings and loan association in the Upland/Ontario area, with assets now in excess of $30,000,000. We can give you the nation's highest interest on your savings. In fact, no other insured financial institution, regardless of size or location, can legally pay you higher interest or offer you greater insurance than we do.

Here's just one example. Save $50 a month for 15 years, and at today's interest rates you would then be able to take an income of $50 a month for as long as you wanted, without ever touching your capital. And all the while we'd be reinvesting your savings in your community, helping to make it a better place for all of us.

Why don't you stop by and ask us about the many different types of accounts we can offer you? You'll find a host of free services to choose from, too. All yours with a friendly, personal we're-your-neighbors touch.

So forget about Peg-Leg's mine. (And don't try horse stealing; feed and stall space cost an awful lot these days!) Begin a savings program at Upland Savings instead. It's one good habit you should have.

RESOLUTION NO. 74-27

A RESOLUTION OF THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF SAN DIMAS DECLARING ITS INTENTION TO VACATE CERTAIN PORTIONS OF PUDDINGSTONE DRIVE AND SETTING A TIME AND PLACE FOR A PUBLIC HEARING RELATING TO SAID VACATION

THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF SAN DIMAS DOES RESOLVE AS FOLLOWS:

SECTION 1. The City Council of the City of San Dimas does hereby declare its intention to vacate certain portions of Puddingstone Drive, as shown on the map on file in the office of the City Clerk, to which reference is hereby made for particulars as to the proposed vacation.

SECTION 2. The City Council of the City of San Dimas does hereby elect to proceed to vacate certain portions of said street under the provisions of Part 3, Division 9 of the Streets and Highways Code of the State of California.

SECTION 3. The City Council of the City of San Dimas does hereby determine that the public convenience and necessity require the reservation and exception from the vacation of the permanent easements and right at any time, or from time to time, to construct, maintain, operate, replace, remove, and renew sanitary sewers and storm drains and appurtenant structures in, upon, over and across the said portions of Puddingstone Drive proposed to be vacated, and pursuant to any existing franchises or renewals thereof, or otherwise, to construct, maintain, operate, replace, remove, renew and enlarge lines of pipes, conduits, cables, wires, poles and other convenient structures, equipment and fixtures for the operation of gas pipe lines, telegraphic and telephone lines, railroad lines and for the transportation or distribution of electric energy, petroleum and its products, ammonia, water and incidental purposes, including access and the right to keep the property free from inflammable materials and wood growth, and otherwise to protect the same from all hazards in, upon, and over those portions of street proposed to be vacated.

SECTION 4. The hour of 7:30 p.m. on Monday, the 13th day of May, 1974, is hereby fixed as the time and date, and 245 E. Bonita Avenue is hereby fixed as the place for hearing all persons interested in or objecting to the proposed vacation of those portions of said street.

SECTION 5. Notices of the street vacation shall be posted in the manner prescribed in Section 8322 of the Streets and Highways Code of the State of California or any amendment thereto.

SECTION 6. The City Clerk shall certify to the adoption of this Resolution and shall cause the same to be posted in the manner prescribed by the law for the posting of ordinances of the City.

Physical, mental barriers

Public attitudes harm handicapped

The handicapped person struggling to take his place in society faces not only physical barriers in the environment but the mental barriers that non-handicapped persons have put up between themselves and the disabled.

Pubjic attitudes harmful to the well-being of the handicapped have been in existence for a long time. Ancient Greek and Roman civilizations placed a high premium on perfection of the human body and felt the physically handicapped were inferior; babies born with defects were often sacrificed. Only at a later stage of civilization has society acquired a greater sense of responsbility, replacing aversion to the handicapped with compassion.

Yet over the years the general public has been conditioned to think of the handicapped as pathetic, helpless creatures warranting sympathy. Convinced that this image prevents many handicapped from achieving self-sufficiency, the Easter Seal Society has been working to change public attitudes.

Beatrice A. Wright, Ph.D., professor of psychology at the University of Kansas, has identified four myths about the handicapped that both laymen and professionals often succumb to. The first is that the handicapped are more maladjusted than the non-handicapped. In short, "a twisted mind in a twisted body." There is a tendency to reduce all the emotional difficulties of the handicapped child or adult to his disability, when in fact, there are many contributing factors not all of which are even connected to the disability. "Most persons with physical limitations make about as good (or as poor) a personality adjustment as do the non-handicapped," Dr. Wright says.

The second myth is that the handicapped have tragic lives filled with suffering, frustration and rejection. But the great majority of people with a disability, even those with severe disabilities, have not allowed the disability to overshadow everything else. They retain their values and in the process, physique becomes less important than other values and things that give a person pleasure and satisfaction.

A third myth is that the lives of disabled people must be filled with excessive frustration. Having a disability does not mean the person is subject to more frustration, Dr. Wright says. "He may be subject to more of certain kinds of frustration but evidently he becomes less exposed to other sources of frustration, the net effect being a frustration level that in general approximates the usual." Just as there are handicapped persons who are highly frustrated, so are there non-handicapped persons who are highly frustrated.

The last myth is that disability is a punishment for evil. Because this myth is easily challenged by rational scientific thought, this view is often covertly expressed in the shame and guilt and the need to blame that so commonly surrounds a disability, Dr. Wright notes.

How can attitudes be modified to assist the handicapped person in his struggle for acceptance and self-sufficiency? The Easter Seal Society favors increasing the public's direct contact with the handicapped. John Kemp, a Washburn University law student who was born without arms and legs, says, "Successful integration of the physically handicapped in our schools, churches, businesses and governments will result in greater awareness and appreciation of the physically handicapped. Until then, we will be outside, looking in."

Kemp has artificial arms and legs and at 23, is the youngest person to ever serve on the board of directors of the National Easter Seal Society.

He believes that removing barriers for the handicapped must be done on an individual basis. "Every person we meet must be convinced that we can or will try to do what we can for ourselves without ever being too proud to ask for help when we can't. With this attitude we will change their minds and with that we will remove the barriers."

Educational programs are another means of changing attitudes. If people are familiar with the facts about physical disabilities, they can help combat the myths which prevail about handicapped people. The modified attitude of just one person influences his family and friends, who in turn influence others in a rapidly multiplying fashion.

Impact report debate continues

Which of the following "may have a significant impact on the environment?"

A. A four-story office building on Foothill Boulevard protested by residents from an adjacent tract development say would block their view of the mountains.

B. A 302 unit apartment complex in Upland's Town Center area that includes two five story and one six story structure.

C. A 68 unit condominium type project built next to the Santa Fe Railroad tracks.

The "correct" answer is either all or none of the above — it all depends on whether the question is posed at the Ontario or Upland City Hall.

Upland has already ruled that developers for the three above listed projects would not have to submit draft environmental impact reports, which generally cost the applicant from $1,000 to $4,000.

Ontario Senior Planner Joyce Babicz reported that three cited example projects would, if proposed in Ontario, require environmental impact reports.

Despite the different approaches followed by Ontario and Upland, they are both governed by the same state law which sets guidelines for the environmental impact report procedure.

Upland has never required a developer to submit an impact report, which includes technical data on air pollution, traffic, noise levels and a projects' projected effect on schools.

Upland planning commissioners and city councilmen have frequently stated that they, along with the city's architectural commission, for years have considered environmental factors during the city's review procedures. This careful scrutiny, they contend, placed the city in the environmental review business long before the state made impact reports a mandatory consideration.

Recently elected Councilwoman Ina Petokas campaigned on a platform that stated the city, in effect, is ignoring the spirit of the state-mandated environmental review process.

Likewise, Planning Commissioner Donald Brownell said, "I think I could support placing more teeth in the city's environmental impact report procedure.

"Some people see the environmental review process as routine and just a necessary evil, and this seems to be the approach we are taking," Brownell said.

In Ontario, where 24 full impact reports have been required from developers, the environmental review process is taken "very seriously," Mrs. Babicz said.

Tom Lamb, Ontario planning assistant, said, "As a general rule of thumb, we require an environmental impact report for construction of anything over three dwelling units or for any zone change, although the crucial consideration is where the site is located and what it's effects could be."

"We feel the environmental impact report is a tremendous planning tool. It gives the planning commissioners and councilmen, who are lay people, more information on which to base their decisions," Lamb said.

Although growth patterns and the types of developments differ from one city to another in the West End, Upland appears to be somewhat less demanding than Montclair and Chino in the environmental report process.

Montclair has required three full environmental impact reports, while Chino had one report submitted for a subdivision that was not in agreement with the city's general plan.

Upland, on the other hand, requires more information than other area cities from developers during the preliminary screening process which determines if a full report is required.

Although this information is less comprehensive than what is found in Ontario's full environmental impact reports, planning commissioners do get some information on factors ranging from a project's impact on schools to plant life.

But, the state has left open to the judgment of local officials a determination of what constitutes a "significant" effect on the environment. If a project may have a significant effect on the environment, it requires a report. If local staffs and planners say a proposal doesn't fall into the "significant" category, a report isn't required.

"Virtually every project has some effect on the environment, so where do you draw the line?," Upland Commissioner Brownell said.
